

THE HARNESS PROJECT

Harnessing awareness for service, therapy, and emotional support dogs.
Sharing stories, changing lives.

"Meet John Doe" type posters will introduce the public to members of the service and therapy dog community.

The thermometer will be used to see money raised and track the number of new volunteers.

Live video stream of the training facilities give city goers a look into the inner workings of service dog training.

Interactive maps will allow people to see events and volunteer opportunities nearby.

The interactive website will be projected on the wall to allow people to learn more about the project and the service and therapy dog community.

The Harness Project posters spread awareness of the different dog

By posting messages on their sides, buses make the message mobile.

At the Sunday event, people will be able to talk directly to trainers and meet dogs.
